EA Cricket 07 Stroke Variation Patch v1.2.Q: What are the advantages of inline static functions? I'm just learning C++ with the help of a book, and I noticed that there is a lot of inline functions that are basically the same, just with a different name and different parameters. Can someone explain what the advantage of these inline functions are? An example: `class Class1 { public: Class1(int a, int b) : a(a), b(b) {} void func() { a = 2; b = 3; } int a; int b; }; int main() { Class1 c1(1, 2); c1.func(); return 0; }` A: In the non-inline case, a and b are actually local variables to the function. A static function can't change them. It's the simple use of a name that's hiding the "data structure is local" aspect of the class, which is essential for most C++ classes (barring those that are pure abstract classes, which can't have data members), and which allows more concise and less error-prone code. In C++03, when you don't need to actually call the class method, you can inline the function and its call: `inline void func() { a = 2; b = 3; } //... func();` Or: `inline void func() { a = 2; b = 3; } //... func();`
